Dear

Mark

Hoorah! we're going to be on the "telly". A couple of weeks ago, we auditioned for a BBC producer in Manchester for a spot on "Showcase" (a new music programme taking over from "Pop Quiz" during the summer, to be hosted by David Essex!) Well, they've just asked us to be on the first show which is scheduled for Saturday June 26th (BBC1 - 6.45 pm). We'll be playing "East of Eden" recorded in advance as unfortunately it's not a live show, but at last you'll be able to see exactly how ugly we really are!

The recording of the album is going very well. However, as some of you will have realised, our plans for recording and touring have been displaced by some two and a half months due to problems with the studio (it was radically rebuilt earlier this year and took much longer to get ready than was originally anticipated), so we actually began recording in the middle of May rather than in March as was originally intended. We are being given plenty of time to do the album the way we want to - however, it does mean that we are unlikely to be on the road till the album is released which is now likely to be August. Hopefully, the single (probably Eleanor Rigby/Three Dancers) will precede the album by a few weeks, though as yet it's difficult to be more specific as there are many things to be sorted out. However, new versions of three tracks from "Smiling at Grief" are to re-appear, these being East of Eden, This City and Creepshow (Three Dancers will be the "B" side of the single but not on the album). We'll write to you with all the details as soon as the album is completed.

Well that's about all for now. By the time this reaches you we'll be back in Manchester recording and hopefully well on the way to completing what we already feel is a very exciting album. Until then, thanks again for your support - keep in touch.

Regards

P.S. Those of you who are big Genesis fans may well be interested in a fanzine called "Afterglow" which is produced by one of our friends in Corby, Northants. The mag is well presented with good art work and interesting features. For more details contact:
